Office: Jesse Macy House (1205 Park St.) #201 Phone: 269-3091 Email:
PURCELL@grinnell.edu

Office Hours: Wednesday 10:00-11:30 am, Friday 1-3 pm, and by appointment (I strongly recommend appointments, as I have an irregular schedule because I direct the Rosenfield Program). I am here to help you learn this semester. Please come see me during office hours or make an appointment, so I can speak with you one-on-one. Call or e-mail me anytime with questions or problems. I am available!

Course Outline and Objectives:

This course provides an introduction to issues of historical causation, argumentation, and evidence, through the lens of U.S. History in the age of the American, French, and Haitian Revolutions. We will consider how historians have formed and changed their interpretations over time as we also discover how and why historical change took place.

One of our main tasks in this class will be to learn to analyze U.S. history in a transnational context. How did the American, French, and Haitian revolutions influence one another? How did their social implications differ? What do we gain by viewing the United States in relationship to other countries, rather than in isolation? How does the narrative of U.S. history relate to British, French, and Caribbean history? How did these revolutions help to form the modern definition of human rights?

Students in this class will also learn to become better historians themselves (and, hopefully, to fall in love with the process of history). You will hone your reading, writing, speaking, and thinking skills. We are not only interested in the facts of history, but also in how the past becomes meaningful.

History 100 is a course designed to make students familiar with how history works as a professional practice. We will develop skills in five key areas:

- Textual Analysis and Conceptualization
 - Using key historical concepts such as cause/effect, unintended consequences, truth v. interpretation, “the past as a foreign country,” and reading against-the-grain.
- Historiographical Dialogue and Debate

- Identifying different historiographical and methodological approaches for thinking about the past and framing historical inquiry (i.e. local, intellectual, political, diplomatic, social, economic, cultural, gender, global)
- Writing
 - Crafting short essays that provide a clear thesis, appropriate evidence, and a sense of the larger historical context of their topics.
- Research
 - Formulating a viable research question and produce an annotated bibliography that investigates it using appropriate primary and secondary sources.
- Presentation
 - Delivering formal oral presentations of historical research with attention to clear argumentation, successful use of supporting evidence, self-positioning in relevant secondary scholarship, and engaging style.

Student Responsibilities and Evaluation:

This course will consist of a mixture of lecture, discussion, small-group work, and other in-class exercises. From time to time you will need to meet with a small group or to view a film outside of class. Students are expected to attend all classes having done the reading and ready to discuss it. Learning is a collaborative process, so speak up and share your ideas with your classmates! Engage with the sources, and share your ideas.

All assignments must be turned in on time and good order. Papers must be typed, double-spaced, with normal fonts and margins, in a 10 or 12-point font. All citations must be in footnotes or endnotes in University of Chicago style. Further guidelines for papers will be handed out in class. Extensions (for sickness or other emergency) will not be granted unless they are approved ahead of time. Late assignments will receive a deduction of one-half letter grade per day and will not be accepted more than two days late. Please familiarize yourself with the Student Handbook guidelines about academic dishonesty at Grinnell, and abide by the rules. Please check your email regularly, since I will use email to make class announcements.

Students in this course will complete a film review, a short document analysis paper, a book review, a French Revolution research assignment, one 3-4 page paper, a 7-10 page annotated bibliography, and a final exam. Everyone will also do an oral presentation on the topic of his/her annotated bibliography. Other in-class assignments will count towards class participation.

Please note: poor attendance will seriously hurt your grade in this class. You cannot participate if you are not in class. If you must miss class for an activity or athletic event, please arrange your absence with me at least one week in advance.

Please turn off your cell phone, and do not check email or text messages during class. We will be using technology for class, and you may use electronic devices, but it's important to keep your attention focused on class materials.

If you require accommodation for any diagnosed disability, please let me know during the first week of class.
